12. Mountain Khakis Rucksack Bag

Whoever said outdoor gear had to be all rough and rugged looking? Mountain Khakis disagrees, its Rucksack bag is anything but rough looking. Made from 100 percent cotton and canvas this backpack has two exterior water bottle pockets, a protective outer flap with an interior zip pocket, padded contour shoulder straps, a 15-inch padded interior laptop sleeve, and a large center grab handle made from recycled climbing rope—because you can never have too much “real climber” cred. MSRP $170 MountainKhakis.com

13. Pillid

The best kinds of accessories are the ones that serve multiple purposes. At least expert water bottle maker Nalgene seems to think so. Its newest water bottle accessory is the pillid (pronounced pil-lid) which is exactly what it sounds like. A water bottle lid that doubles as a storage compartment for your valuables, vitamins, supplements, and medication. Thanks to two removable dividers, you also have the option of splitting your storage space into half or quarters which is great for storing keys, cash, jewelry, gum, snacks, and other essentials. Replacement lids are available for purchase. MSRP $15 with a wide-mouth bottle, or separately for $5 Nalgene.com

14. Summer Moon 2

This lightweight, two-person, fully freestanding dome tent is perfect for anyone looking to upgrade their portable shelters. The simple two pole design provides 29.2-square feet of interior space with a 41-inch peak height, with easy access provided by a large D-shaped entrance. Reflective guylines and gayout loops around the perimeter help you move around safely in the dark, and a night glow accessory uses your headlamp to provide interior lighting for the tent. MSRP $180 SierraDesigns.com

15. Sven Can See Anti-Fog Gel

Foggy eyewear does nothing for your vision—except make it worse. With one application of the anti-fog/anti-frost solution from Sven Can See you'll have all day protection for all of your lenses including sunglasses, prescription/safety glasses, and goggles. Each 8mL of the eco-friendly solution comes in a pen-like applicator and creates an instant shield for your lenses no matter the weather MSRP $11 SvenCanSee.com

16. Trayvax Axis Wallet

When you head out on the trail you make sure to swap your briefcase for your backpack, but what about your wallet? Enter the Trayvax Axis wallet. This stainless steel-framed billfold holds up to 14 cards and eight bills. It comes with a built-in money clip, hidden coin pocket/key holder and MIL-SPEC paracord attachment. Made in the USA with a lifetime warranty, there's no doubt that this is the wallet you'll want to pack for your next trip. MSRP $50, Trayvax.com

17. UCO Flatpack Mini Grill

Sometimes setting up a campfire is not the most viable option. For those moments, there's the UCO Flatpack Mini Grill. This easy folding, quick set up, stainless steel grill and fire pit features high sides that make it safe for cooking in windy conditions, complete with a sturdy base to keep fires off the ground. Weighing a mere 2 pounds, its perfect for any backpack. MSRP $40 UCOGear.com
