JACKSON HOLE

Dress Like a Local

Just because the only ties locals care about are at the end of a fly line doesn't mean Jackson Hole doesn't have a sense of style. It does, though chances are it's not what you're used to. Here's where to get some help.*

Michelle Julene's creations are larger than life, but her downtown Jackson boutique, Michelle Julene Couture, is tiny. Still, men and women of the cowboy-chic set flock here for fringed, beaded, and fur-trimmed creations of denim and leather. For more casual Western wear, head to Wyoming Outfitters. Fleece fashionistas prefer Skinny Skis or the new flagship store of home-grown outdoor clothing line Cloudveil. Another locally designed product, Mountain Khakis, is slowly ousting Carhartts as the uniform pant of yuppies (that's young alpine professionals); pick up a pair at Jack Dennis Outdoor Shop.
